

From Webster's Dictionary of American English 1828...

TYR'ANNY, n.

1. Arbitrary or despotic exercise of power; the exercise of power over subjects and others with a rigor not authorized by law or justice, or not requisite for the purposes of government. Hence tyranny is often synonymous with cruelty and oppression.
2. Cruel government or discipline; as the tyranny of a master.
3. Unresisted and cruel power.
4. Absolute monarchy cruelly administered.

CS Lewis wrote,

“Of all tyrannies, a tyranny sincerely exercised for the good of its victims may be the most oppressive. It would be better to live under robber barons than under omnipotent moral busybodies. The robber baron's cruelty may sometimes sleep, his cupidity may at some point be satiated; but those who torment us “for our own good”, will torment us without end, for they do so with the approval of their own conscience. They may be more likely to go to Heaven, yet at the same time likelier to make a Hell of earth. This very kindness stings with intolerable insult. To be “cured” against one's will and “cured” of states which we may not regard as disease, is to be put on a level of those who have not yet reached the age of reason or those who never will; to be classed with infants, imbeciles, and domestic animals.”

I have reached the age of reason, and I am none of the above, neither infant, nor imbecile, nor domestic animal.

You have reached the age of reason, and you are none of the above.

Separation

Americans, are being asked by their elected “representatives”, and by many of their fellows, to deny their fellow Americans the basic services of life... carpentry services... plumbing services... medical services... food... water... entertainment... employment... unless, with regards to a particular, experimental medical intervention, their fellow Americans do what they're told, like it or not, want it or not, voluntarily or not, willingly or not, advisably or not, for their benefit or not, at their doctor's advice or not, healthy or not,

Here's the attitude they have toward us... "If you do what you're told, we'll let you have your rights".

Did you hear what I said? "If you do what you're told, we'll let you have your rights".

Really?

On its face, this is unkind.

This is unjust.

This is unconstitutional.

This is unloving.

This is un-American.

We have been for the last year plus, isolated from one another, and are now being pitted against one another, to deny one another jobs, to rat one another out, to deny medical care, deny travel, soon to deny the ability to get food and water, unless we conform and do what we are told, like it or not.

Conform.

Obey.

Submit.

Do these things sound kind, loving, American, to you?

They sound tyrannical to me, and in this moment, when tyranny threatens our way of life far more dangerously than any germ, we need to Not be isolated and pitted against one another, but we need to stand together as we are standing today.

United in this fight, one in this fight. Only then will we prevail in this fight.

Fingerprints

I ask you to consider for a moment, your fingerprints. Stick with me...

There's not another set like that in all the world.

I ask you to consider an optical scan of your retina, in your eye, and the image that it casts.

It too can be used to recognize you out of all the people on the Earth.

We are unique. Period... but it seem as though only the security world recognizes that.

In the medical community, we seem to have come to believe that we're all identical, all requiring the same, exact thing... all over the world.

Your cardio-vascular system works exactly like mine, right?

Your cardio-pulmonary system works just like mine, right?

Your endocrine and exocrine glandular system is identical to mine, right?

Your skin, the largest organ in your body by the way, your skin's color, texture and sensitivity to sun and irritation, and its need to be shaven is identical to mine, right?

Your digestive system produces exactly the same amount of gas that mine does, right?

Who thinks like this?

Here's who... the six sigma people who now run our medical institutions... the institutional machines that seems to have forgotten their charter, their reason for their very existence;

care of humans,
unique humans,
differing humans,
individual humans.

Thus we are being ruled, medically by the six sigma people, those who treat us according to a clinical system designed to maximize profits based on “bell curve” findings, unable to deal with the outliers.

And this seems to come more regularly from the teaching hospitals...

... where the best and brightest among us must of course have all the answers for us all, no?... so long as we all fall within the six sigma limits of their investigative bell curve findings, no?

This is neither medicine nor science, neither caring nor teaching.

It is a dogmatic scientism... a belief system that is founded, not in the realities of human existence, but on the creation of a mechanistic industry, designed to turn humanity into a commodity.

But medicine, is about caring.

Science is about discovery.

Neither is about dogma, nor conformity to a business model designed within the six sigma limits of the bell curve, into which we all must dogmatically fit, whether we fit there or not.

What is dogma? Let me answer that like this... Our doctrines are what we teach and believe.

Our dogmas are what we have to teach and believe whether we believe them or not.

I will not have my life ruled by someone's, anyone's dogma.

Nor will I allow my life and my decisions, my family's decisions, my community's decision to be ruled by a dogmatic adherence to some conformity.

Just ask yourselves... why, if we can agree that science is about discovery, why are so many actual scientists, some of whom I have been following for a decade, being censored, shadow-banned and cancelled... called out as private citizens and then roundly slandered and discredited by social media platforms, news media platforms, by politicians including the president of the United States among others, as if they had just bombed a building.

None of what I have said is incorrect, neither inaccurate.

The only rebuttal against it will be, “Yeah, but what about...?” And all the “yeah, but what abouts” have been scientifically, factually discredited... hence the need for personal attacks, censorship and cancellation.

Why were a noted Yale rheumatologist's two Lupus patients denied a medical exemption from the experimental gene therapy, parading as a vaccine?

These individuals' doctor, was not allowed to prescribe treatment for them. Instead of being treated as individual patients of that doctor, they were required to become unwilling participants in a medical trial, against their will, against their doctor's advice, so that they must receive the same treatment as all others within the six sigma limits of the bell curve, even though they are clearly outliers, outside any established norms, currently afflicted with lupus!

Thankfully, this brave doctor stood up for his patients in a kind, loving and just manner, and pushed until the medical exemption was approved. But why would any medical institution deny a doctor's medical exemption in the first place!?

Any what about their freedom as freeborn American citizens to decide for themselves?

...and what about the freedom afforded to them by God and codified in the rights listed in our founding documents?... rights that were stripped from them and from their doctor.

Thank God for their brave doctor, who resisted and prevailed as we are resisting today.

Those clear outliers, Lupus patients, were required to conform... medical consequences be damned, doctor's orders be damned, individuality be damned, freedom be damned.

That freedom is a special thing, and we should understand it better.

Yes, I know that everyone here wishes that they made more money, and could get more and better stuff, and live in a better house...

But in truth, as we live right now, we all here, live better than over 95% of the world's humans.

We and our way of life is the envy of the world, thus explaining why humans from all over planet earth will break their nation's laws and risk life and limb to get here.

Sadly, today, many are coming, actually being asked to come, that they might live a better life, funded by underground employment, and our entitlement system... even that, even a life on our entitlement system being a far superior life to the one they experienced in their own nations.

But historically, people from other countries didn't come here for human entitlements, but for an opportunity.

An opportunity to do what?

Well fill in the blank! An opportunity to do what their hearts desired...

to do whatever they were gifted and skilled to do...

an opportunity to achieve as far as their abilities and training could take them... an opportunity to do what they were not afforded an opportunity to do in their native countries.

And why did they do that? What inspired them to do that?

They heard from their families here, that this was a land of opportunity.

They heard from other nations that this country, founded on the principles of Nature's God, was a country that was willing to send its finest, its young, strong men and women, even into the hell of war, to stand for the freedoms of strangers in foreign lands, to fight and die for the freedom of others in foreign lands.

They did not fight and die for your freedom from sickness, but for your freedom.

They did not fight and die for your freedom from inconvenience, but for your freedom.

They did not fight and die for your freedom to have a new apartment with central air, but for your freedom.

They fought and died for your freedom... all else that we enjoy in our culture stems from that and from that alone, and there are those among whom will even today, I and my colleagues among them, fight and die for your freedom.

Robert F. Kennedy Jr. is quoted as saying, “We need to love our freedom, more than we fear disease”.

The promise of health in exchange for your freedom, or the “right” to attend a concert in exchange for your freedom, or the “right” to shop unrestricted in exchange for your freedom, or the “right” to travel in exchange for your freedom... These are all contradictions!

It is neither the government's job to guarantee your health, nor do they have the ability to provide such things. It's a lie.

The government does not give me my rights, and then tell me, “If you do what you're told, we'll let you, we'll allow you to have your rights”.

“Allowances” are not rights, they are allowances... from the slave master, and they are, while thinly veiled, nothing more than tyranny.

All these things, these restrictions, these mandates, these requirements, whether locally required or federally required, are all the tools of tyrants.

I say, medical tyranny be damned.

I will receive unwanted medical interventions only and ever, on my cold, dead body.

Why did those old fogies in the history books say such things as “Give me liberty or give me death”?

Why would anyone say something as stupid as, “I regret that I have but one life to give for my country”.

Stupid? Really?

That life was given for freedom from tyranny, and no mistake.
Your freedom. My freedom.

There are, as some seem to have forgotten, things worse than death.

Slavery is one of those things that is worse than death.

Medically tyranny, which is tantamount to slavery, is another.

I will have none of it.

I have, and will continue to have personal sovereignty.

I have and will continue to have bodily autonomy.

I have and will continue to have freedom, and there are those of us who will today, fight and die for your freedom.

Jesus said, greater love has no man than this, than to be willing to lay down his life for his friend.

God bless you.
